What’s New and Exciting?

New Year, New Goals:
Focusing on helping our clients make healthy decisions and empowering them to share their stories!

First off, we want to thank our community for a tremendous holiday season. When we think we have hit our threshold, our community gives more. Can the Griz brought in over 448,720 pounds of food and dollars for the GVFB. Huffing For Stuffing grossed $160,000. The net good is over 525,000 pounds and dollars in a three-week period. Because of this generosity, we provided our community with well over 1,200 holiday food boxes during Thanksgiving and served another 700 families for the Christmas holidays through our partners.

Now firmly into the New Year, we already have new exciting projects and events to share with our community. As we build on our Learning Garden Pilot Program we look ahead to the building of the raised beds, trails, and pollinator gardens at the Story Mill Community Park. Our kick-off event will be March 30th from 2:00-3:30 pm at the Story Mill Community Center when we will share our vision and recruit volunteers. This is a collaborative effort that brings opportunities for programming for our clients and builds awareness about the importance of agriculture and food security. Our Un-processed Pantry Project (UP3) is launching March 2nd. More information can be found on page 2.

We are also fortunate to be a member of Montana’s No Kid Hungry Amplify MT Speaker’s Bureau. The Speaker’s Bureau is an opportunity for voices in our community to come together to educate elected officials and the general public on the root causes of hunger and shine a light on the often hidden crisis of hunger. Head to page 4 for more information.
In July we launched a brand new, HRDC wide volunteer portal. This is the first volunteer software HRDC has utilized and we are all very excited about the potential it offers.

The Benefits:
By posting all volunteer needs online, we have been able to communicate opportunities we didn’t have a way to identify before. GVFB now has brought in volunteers who wash dishes during our busiest times, making sure there are always clean produce bins to use. We have new office volunteers to keep up with all the paper work, phone calls, and general organization our increasing client numbers require. Additionally, we have recruited new warehouse volunteers to our existing teams. All of these positions are critical to keeping the food bank running smoothly. From my perspective, this software has the potential to simplify and expand upon scheduling, reporting, and recruitment not only within GVFB but across all HRDC programs. Farewell to God’s Garden

For the last ten years we have been the lucky recipient of some of the best produce around thanks to Dale McNichols of God’s Garden. Dale has worked tirelessly each year to make sure GVFB was flush with fresh garden produce. In the ten years God’s Garden was in operation, Dale donated nearly a quarter of a million pounds of produce to GVFB! 2018 was the final year of the garden operation and we aren’t quite sure what we will do without him. We will miss seeing Dale daily and the bounty of produce he always brought with him.

Project Highlight >>> Un-Processed Pantry Project

Bozeman Health, Gallatin Valley Food Bank, Healthy Gallatin, Livingston Food Resource Center, and Montana State University Food and Health Lab are joining forces to conduct The Un-Processed Pantry Project (UP3). UP3, pronounced YOU – PEA – THREE, is a study that aims to improve the health of food pantry clients by increasing access to and intake of un-processed foods. The goal of UP3 is to create a framework that any food pantry in Montana or the United States can use to provide clients with un-processed food options, nutrition education, and health measures in order to address diet-related health concerns. Ultra-processed foods (i.e., shelf-stable, energy-dense foods high in added sugar, fat, salt, and additives) comprise over half of the American diet and intake is even higher among low-income populations. Consumption of ultra-processed foods is linked to chronic diseases. These health risks disproportionately affect low-income populations, including those among Native and rural communities in Montana. The UP3 Team has recruited 40 families to help us understand how eating unprocessed foods can impact your health and the health of other food pantry clients. Participating clients will receive:

- 16 weeks of nutritious food
- Instruction on how to cook quick, healthy, and budget friendly meals
- Support from a diettitian and food bank staff to help improve their health.

Launch date is March 2nd.

How do we get it all done?

With a small but mighty staff of nine, two AmeriCorps VISTA’s and 120 volunteers a week, we manage to distribute over 3.71 TONS of food a day to people in need! Last year volunteers contributed over 17,000 hours of service to help create a safety net for our community.

Where does the food come from?

Last year we rescued 1,162,758 pounds of food from local grocers. This allows us a great variety of foods for example; cut produce, ready to eat foods, dairy, and baked goods. The balance of food in our store comes from food drives, local growers, individuals, churches, businesses, and purchases.

Where does the funding come from?

97% of our funding comes from our local community which includes foundations, individuals, businesses, and congregations. A small amount of federal revenue from FEMA makes up the remaining 3%.

Client Empowerment: Amplify MT Speaker’s Bureau

Here at the food bank we are always looking for ways to improve our programs and services and share our clients’ stories with our community. So we were really excited to partner with Montana No Kid Hungry to engage our community members in a conversation around challenges they face. Through this process, we hope to identify individuals with lived experience who are interested in building their leadership and public speaking skills. Our goal is to empower people to share their stories while enabling them to be both self and systems-advocates, to educate others on the realities of hunger and poverty, and to improve the system for others that follow. We are using a three-pronged approach:

1. Focus Groups: Our focus groups are used to collect preliminary information. We ask our participants about their lives and their experiences with different services and programs in the community.
2. Public Speaking and Leadership Development Training: Focus Group participants can choose to enroll in our free 10-week training, where they will learn and develop skills in public speaking, leadership, and advocacy.
3. Engagement: Graduates will then put their skills into action. No Kid Hungry staff will work to connect graduates to different opportunities, while collaborating with graduates to develop new initiatives, depending on what their interests are. Examples might include serving on school committees, leading local poverty simulations, speaking at a panel or talking with an elected official about hunger in Montana.
